

IS NOT UNCONSTITUTIONAL

Sen. Kellogg "Willing To Try" League—Not Permanent War Preventive.

Washington, Aug. 7.—Provisions of the league of nations covenant imposing obligations on congress do not violate the American constitution and the covenant can be ratified with interpretive reservations without requiring resubmission to the other nations, in the opinion of Senator Kellogg, Republican, Minnesota, expressed in a legal argument in the senate today dealing with the treaty making power.

Senator Kellogg said he was "willing to try" the league, tho he did not believe it would permanently prevent war. He suggested reservations dealing with the Monroe doctrine, domestic questions and the power of congress to decide questions of peace or war. Citing the alliance of 1778 with France, the Jay treaty of 1794 and many other obligations entered into by the United States, the speaker said there was ample precedent for various guarantees in the covenant which have been objected to on the ground of constitutionality.

"Because a treaty limits sovereign power—I speak of sovereign power as the power to make laws—it is not thereby invalidly limited," he continued. "Every treaty we negotiate to a certain extent destroys certain freedom of sovereign action. A treaty, of which we have many, conferring certain privileges of difference binding, and if we perform our agreement, it limits legislative action."

GIVEN A COMMISSION

Harry Robbins Put in Quartermaster's Dept Without Knowing It.

Once in awhile the war department pulls the proverbial "bonehead." Harry Robbins, sergeant first class of the medical detachment of the 150th field artillery, was recommended for a commission in the quartermaster corps while still in France. He did not return to the United States with his division, but remained overseas to take a medical course at the University of Lyon.

As he stepped off the gang plank at New York a few days ago, he was handed his commission. It made him a second lieutenant in the quartermaster reserve corps. Robbins doesn't know the difference between a Q. M. regulation and Italian chant, but he accepted the appointment just the same.

Robbins has been visiting in Topeka and will leave in a few days with his wife to spend the rest of the summer in Colorado.
